

Transaction and Balance History

Transaction History by Source for the period: 2/24/2023 to 2/23/2024

Personal Rate of Return for the period: 17.30%

Personal rates of return are calculated on a time-weighted basis using an industry standard approach known as the Modified Dietz Method. This rate of return calculation takes into account your beginning and ending balance during the dates you have selected, along with any transactions that have taken place in your account (i.e., contributions, withdrawals, transfers, loan activity, earnings and dividend activity) during this period. Your account's cash flow is comprised of all your contributions and withdrawals during this period. These cash flows are then weighted; which means, each cash flow is given a value based on how long the money was invested in your 401(k) account during this period. Please note that your personal rate of return results may appear atypical if you have chosen a very short timeframe and/or the time period contains unusually large cash flows.
